CMSA Call for Short Articles: Dispelling Myths around Meat

We invite all interested graduate students and academic/industry professionals to submit short articles on the topic of 'Dispelling Myths around Meat' to be published on the CMSA public website, linked to the CMSA social media outlets and in the CMSA members' newsletter. The goal is to translate new or novel scientific research around aspects of meat production and consumption into a straightforward article for consumers of all types. This is a great chance for authors to contribute having our message presented in a fair and balanced manner.

General Guidelines: Articles should be no more than 2 pages single spaced, not including references, photos, figures, etc., and submitted using Word. The article must be supported by scientific literature and references formatted in Meat Science journal style. Review will be completed by the CMSA Newsletter committee and any comments/revisions sent back to the author(s) must be addressed before acceptance for publication is given.

Please submit your short articles by March 31, 2018 to the CMSA Newsletter Committee at admin@cmsa-ascv.ca.
